Hired Help. Mr. Editor: We should like to know how you figure when you talk about hiring "good, reliable help," etc., which is all very well, but that means good wages, and where is the money coming from to pay such help, with things as they are at present, when fine apples bring only 50 ets. a bushel, and hard to sell at that, and potatoes the same, and milk only about 13 ets. a gallon, (old measure) after paying the freight, and carrying to the depot, besides graining the cattle, and hay so low that it don't pay to sell it, and so we have to take the advice, so often given in the good old Maine Farmer, to keep stock enough to eat it up.

does not pay in cash. Of course, such wire work does not bring the money with which property has been payden. If help is hired on the farm-good helpthere should be a money income from it, at least enough to meet the outlay. The Hon. S. A. Hickox, who gave a lecture last fail before some of the institutes in this State, on how to bring up a New England farm, related that in deliberating over the prob-lem, when in his first year's experience he did not have money enough out of his year's operations with which to pay his help, he decided that the reason of his being short was that he "did not raise enough to sell."

By increasing his production, the problem was solved. Just so with every farmer. Increased labor employed must below the complete the control of t portionate increase of production. It is in

At the Vermont State Dairymen's meeting, he told the farmers assembled that the had got to find serious fault with them for their disregard for what was right and profitable in the handling of their cows. And so he told them of riding on the cars know across the country on a cold, stormy, miscrable day, yet many of the cows were seen ranging the fields from morning till night, and the owners probably paying thirty dollars for cotton reversely. thirty dollars for cotton seed meal, twenty-eight for linseed and twenty-six for core meal—"warrier to the core takes the ground, with us, that "an agri-cultural college should turn out farmers." If not, then where is agriculture to get its share of advantages from these institutions!

Mr. D. D. Howe, Secretary of the Vermont State Grange, has been placed in charge of the Experiment Farm at Burlingcharge of the experiment farm at Burling-ton. Mr. Howe is a man of intelligence, a practical and successful farmer, and has been chosen with special reference to his ability to manage the college farm in a man-ner to benefit the agriculture of the State. of their interests in that institution. It is only another proof that the rewards come to those who earn them. Will the farmers

Hampshire, a sheep grower of some experience, in an article in the People and Patriot, says that "when an inexperienced New Hampshire farmer, desiring to embark in raising mutton and early lambs, stocks up with mutton sheep of any of the heavy English breeds, he is doomed to disappointment, loss and failure, unless the same ment, loss and failure, unless the same methods of feeding and handling are con-tinued." We can endorse the statement as also applicable to Maine, and we have seen many failures in proof. There are comparatively few who have learned how to are for and feed heavy weight mutton sheep, and keep them in health and thrift. Experience has chiefly been with other sheep, where requirements are less exact-

They say that farmers are always grow They say that farmers are always growling; nevertheless, facts are stubborn things and we are willing to be enlightened as to how farmers are to pay for good help, besides boarding them, and have anything lefto live on. While good, plenteous crops are a blessing to the consumer, we fail to see how the producer is benefited, except by the satisfaction in having a bountiful harvest to reward his labors. But that won't naw the bills. So, please tell us how.

We are aware that the problem of hiring help, on the farm, is a two-sided one, and, too, that it is a difficult one for many farmers to solve. Often do we meet the query, when urging this or that improvement, or an extension of the business, "Where is the money coming from to pay the help?" We are willing to confess that it is not easy for a second party to readily designate how it who are yearly illustrating it, and so long the practice would not be continued. In our own case, we have always from the but the best. Though costing more, the best help is the cheapest in the end. While time less of wear, tear and breakage with their service, and what is much more than it pay its way. So we say to others, hire good help, and then accomplish something

Some good work was done by Ex-Gover-for Hoard of Wiscomin while on his lee. for Hoard of Wiscomin while on his lecture trip east last winter. The Governor the meal—warming all out-of-doors with high priced food, and asking the Lord to bless their efforts towards the advancement of thy kingdom in the cow."

From this he went on to show the Vermont dairymen what such exposure meant to them. At his home creamery he keeps appliances for experiment, and he keeps accurate accounts of the milk brought in, while all the while a record of the temperature and the character of the weather is also noted. Yesterday was perhaps a raw stormy day, he went on to say, and a pafron brings in his milk the next morning; it

"Yes," he says, "I guess they was out. Was you by my place?" He then can by his records go on to show the patron the consequent falling off in milk, and how much he has lost by his neglect. Not only is the quantity less but when the Babcock test is haplied a falling off of butter fat is found. The fact is that a cow must take care of herself first, and if the effects of the food consumed are required to maintain warmth it cannot be put into the milk.

Here is a good lesson for all dairymen and stookowners to heed. Exercise is important, air freeh and pure is healthful, sunchine desirable, but exposure to chilling winds and cold storms should be guarded sgainst. Care in this direction is especially meeded at this spring season of the year. Not only does this hold true with cows but applies to other cattle and to sheep and colts as well. Cows make a record of the milk and the buttes, but the effect is with others all the same.

There is no stock more effected by improper exposure than sheep, and none so frequently neglected. This is especially them the supportance of promoting a milk less the importance of promoting a milk about never be lost sight of. Chilling winds and cold storms will have the where a wind and cold storms will have the
